Big Opportunity For Music In Service Businesses

Low Cost & Effort

Rhonda Hadi of Oxford University says businesses that provide an experience can reap the greatest rewards from a change to music.

Sam Woodcock of Cafe Del Mar

"The service itself is so intangible," she said, "that people rely on any cues they can to gauge the quality of the service that they've received."⁴

"Music...is as important to a restaurant as its food, its service, its décor. Get it right and customers will sense that the atmosphere feels right in a way they may not even be able to articulate."²⁴

Play music from the country of origin

"If there's a cultural element – say with Indian or Brazilian influence – that can only make the association stronger."⁵

"Music done right can also take on a tonne of the heavy lifting needed to transport you to a different universe entirely – or at least a different country"²⁴

What's the right music?⁹

87% of people say they mean the right volume (restaurants)

90% said music in a restaurant or bar had previously made them leave or vow never to return.¹⁰

The type of music you play matters

Play it louder to sell sweets and fast food and play it softer to sell greens and health food⁸

Louder music can cause more stress, making consumers choose healthier or sweet food option.

Or play it softer to stop them rushing off⁹

"There was a 9.1% increase in overall sales when playing music that matched the brand, compared with playing randomly selected popular songs"¹³

Australian Gourmet Traveller:

Record bars: allow customers and staff to engage with music in your business

“Bars and restaurants are treating music not as a mere aural wallpaper or simply a way to put customers at ease – but as a feature.”

“They’re also a great way to make customers’ and staffs’ tastes a central part of the creative process.”²⁴

Playing 'drinking songs' in a tavern makes customers drink more and stay longer.¹¹

75% of hotel guests like to listen to background music in the lobbies, bars, restaurants and public areas.¹²

...But make sure the music matches your venue's identity¹³

Take a 4.3% dive in sales if the music seems out of whack with your venue's image/brand.

"On brand music" drives 15.6% more dessert sales¹³

What's the right music?¹³

"76% of restaurants that play music matching their menu seem more authentic than those that don't."³

Jazz and lounge music can make customers spend bigger amounts of money than when other genres of music are playing.

Play any kind of half-decent music in your pub, bar or diner!¹⁴

Pubs on a Friday/Saturday with music 48.2% more sales than a pub with no music at all¹⁴

Weekdays in pub with music 21% more sales than a pub with no music at all music¹⁴

Bring in the groups and play music for atmosphere¹⁵

Those eating with others ate up to 48% more food than solo diners

Children consumed 30% more food when eating in a group of nine children than when eating in a group of three children.

If you want to

...Turn tables quickly

Many hotels do not have capacity to seat all of their guests for breakfast, which means they want to turn tables quickly. In those cases, (provide) a brisk soundtrack, rather than the more sedate, leisurely sounds you might expect.⁴

...Get them talking about you

57% say they want to invite friends to join them when live music is played in a restaurant.

68% said atmosphere created by music would influence their repeat business or recommendation.

...Boost the tips jar¹⁷

Tips are up 4% when upbeat songs are played.

Tips leap even when sad songs are played, because it makes us feel compassion¹⁷

Kill the ‘Elevator Music’: Invest in authenticity

Using generic, royalty-free stock music or AI music is a false economy, especially if you target customers under 45.

Up to 75% of Gen Z shoppers in Australia and New Zealand can instantly spot ‘fake’ music, and they associate it with a “cheap” or “inauthentic” brand.²⁵

Match genre to category: Stop guessing, start aligning

Your playlist directly reflects your brand identity. Mismatched music makes your brand feel “disconnected” and “unprofessional” to over 40% of customers.

The data provides a clear blueprint for genre expectations across sectors.²⁵

If you want to

...Please & motivate
your staff

Play up-tempo music¹⁷

Playing 140 beats per minute (bpm) music tempo increases the productivity of doing repetitive tasks to 30.7%.¹⁸

...Lift your brand

Jazz adds pizzazz

'Atmosphere (is) perceived differently (for each) musical style. Pop music (is) youthful, exciting and fashionable while lounge music (is) up-market and more sophisticated; Jazz music, (makes a) cafeteria feel restful, peaceful and fresh.'²⁰

...Manage wait times for tables

Slow tempo music helps ease wait times²

Get to know your customers – the music they like at the volume they like will ease wait times.²²

Play more highly complex music (contains the most information and warps their sense of wait time in a good way).²³

People will wait up to 26% longer when music is played than when no music is played¹⁹

Music’s impact on customer behaviour in AU and NZ

“Stayed longer” responses highest in both countries⁹

Wear your licence with pride: Turn compliance into a trust signal

While more than half the population remains unaware of music licensing laws, displaying a "Licensed to Play" sticker is viewed positively/ neutrally by 94%-95% of AU and NZ consumers.²⁵

Master the volume: Your first and last impression

Volume is not just a setting; it's the most crucial element in your sound strategy. It's the first thing customers notice and the leading cause of complaints in both Australia and New Zealand, with Kiwis being even more sensitive to noise.²⁵

How to start booking live music

Easy, impactful and low risk

Start with:

- Local acoustic performers – they don't take up much space
- Local solos, duos or small trios – same
- Consider local electronic music acts for an 'arty and youthful' vibe

These musicians have little to no tech requirements.

Make sure you pick a genre or style that is suited to the vibe of your business!

Find the Musician

1. Call a booking agent.
Type 'music booking agent' and your suburb or town into a google search. Usually for established musicians
2. Collaborate with a network of businesses.
3. Contact your local council
4. Look up triplej Unearthed under your suburb/town
5. Call AMIN
6. Contact your local High School, Music Conservatorium or University and see if they have any good music students willing to perform, paid
7. Download Muso App and find a local muso who catches your eye

Set a Budget

Consider the size of the band, their profile and how long you need them to perform (40-45 minutes a set is normal)

Get it in Writing

Fill in a performance agreement or a booking agreement (even if the performance is free)
livemusicoffice.com.au

Big Note Yourself!

Tell the world you are hosting live music!

1. Get some marketing support from your council

2. Social media (Facebook, Instagram) - ask your performer to give you a plug on social media and your staff if they're keen
3. Create posters and stick them up wherever it's legal
4. Book some ads on local radio, the local paper (even if it's now all online), arts and lifestyle magazines
5. Print and drop off some flyers to other businesses and to clients coming in ahead of your performance
6. The good ol' A-Frame sign out the front!

Award-winning Darwin Ski Club's 5 live music tips

(Best Live Music Venue, 2022 HospitalityNT Awards)

Renowned for hosting the likes of Jimmy Barnes, John Stevens, Illy, Lime Cordiale and Timmy Trumpet, Darwin Ski Club was recognised for its excellence.

Darwin Ski Club

In celebration of the award, Club Treasurer Paul Gurr shared his top five tips for live music venues:

1. Regularity

Having regular live music at the venue is key to create an atmosphere. We like to mix the artists and styles week to week, and find we can enable opportunities for new artists. Being flexible with the location of where musicians play within the venue is key to match the time of year and our seasonal Tropical weather conditions.

2. Build a fan base

Having a strong social media presence is paramount, ensuring you have regular updates on live music, engaging photos, ages and video content, and making live music fun and part of our normal business. Regularly changing up the artist line ups and genres, arranging and hosting large music events four to five times per year helps to make the venue associated with being the home of live music in Darwin. Exemplary advertising across media platforms with strong, fun, and consistent messaging always pays off too.

3. Take a chance

Take chances with cold calls from artists - some of our best performances have been from those we hadn't worked with before or heard of yet. Researching other live music venues and artists playing, as well as attending other live music venues is a great way to see how your local community is experiencing and enjoying live music outside of your venue. It helps to ensure you don't just offer the same thing time and time again and helps with ideas to cater to a broad range of entertainment.

4. Be flexible with artists

Engage current and new artists and be flexible to the artist's needs or requests. Make sure you pay live artists promptly and on time. Don't stick to just one genre all the time; mix it up.

5. Be broad!

Offer a wide choice of genres, regular music and options for wider audience groups. We always make sure we have something for everyone throughout the year.

A platform to share art - Caffeine Kings

2021 Queensland winner of Restaurant & Catering Association and OneMusic Excellence Award Caffeine Kings in Miami, took home the award for their outstanding recognition and support for the Australian music industry.

Caffeine Kings give a platform for local musicians, both established and up-and-coming, encouraging customers to explore local talent and never-released tracks. They offer free food & drinks for the musicians performing in their venue, along with a further offers for the muso's family and friends attending the gigs to expand the word of mouth factor (and sales).

Beach Burrito Company

Mikaela Vu of Caffeine Kings: "It comes down to actively supporting the incredible talent we have in Australia and as an Australian small business providing them with a platform to share their art. We all need to work alongside each other to provide an experience customers return to."

Big profiles in small towns - a cafe in Tassie

Owners of Marakoopa Café in Tasmania's North East, Lars and Sarah Cooper, highlighted the great sense of community that live music brings to their venue, they have a real commitment to connect musicians and their community. "We felt we could create something unique for the musicians to enjoy our space and connect sincerely with an appreciative audience".

"We encourage higher profile artists to perform at regional and remote venues so that rural communities can enjoy live music too, creating a cultural shift for attending live concerts," said the Coopers.
